What membership entails

TSA exists to promote awareness of the telecare industry, to set and raise standards for the products, services and practice within the industry, to identify and promote good practice and to support networking between members

TSA is the trading name of the Telecare Services Association, a company limited by guarantee (£1). An application for membership of TSA is an application for membership of the company. Members of TSA have rights and responsibilities. Supply Sector Members have no voting rights. They are bound by the rules of the company and must pay any annual membership contribution set by the Board or such additional call on members as may be agreed by the membership at a General Meeting of the company. Once an application for membership has been accepted, any resignation must be delivered in writing to the company's registered address. (A copy of the Telecare Services Association Articles of Association is obtainable on request from the Company Secretary).

Email

TSA has the policy to use email as the primary channel to communicate information to members, including formal company notices.

Declaration

I am authorised to apply on behalf of the above named organisation for RPI membership of TSA. The above named organisation supports the aims and objects of TSA and agrees to be bound by the rules of the company and will pay any fees required from members.
